Well, I'll have to stop that fiirtation and tell Amy all; that is flat. She would not have uttered negation If I had preposed; I know that; But now I'm to marry another, Our little affair, of course, ends. I'll say: "Think of me as a brother, And we will continue good frienda."

Of course, when she hears of my wedding.
There'll be an exhibit of wee;
The copieus tears she'll be shedding.
Will bring on hysterics, I know;
And then there'll be sobbing and sighing.
Perhaps till my tender heart melts.
With vows of affection undying.
And vows to wed nobody else.

"Now, Amy, my dear, do not tremble;
Just need what I'm going to say.
Your nervous emotions dissemble;
Be caim now, my dear friend, I pray.
To tell you my secret I've tarried,
And how I've hated to try;
But, Amy—I'm soon to be married."

ONE NIGHT ONLY!

ONE NIGHT ONLY!

Tuesday, Ev'g, April 23.

To a gentleman who spent some of the best years of his life in Brazil, we are indebted for the following account of an adventure with a jaguar in one of the dark and vast forests of that country:

Jaguars are generally about the size of a large wolf, of a brownish yellow, with black circles and spots along the upper parts, the skin gradully softening down to a pale yellow, and approaching to white about the belly, legs and feet. They steal upon their prey like the tiger, which, in fierceness and strength, they much resemble. They are powerful enough to kill a horse, an ox, or a mule, and carry off or drag away the dead body afterward.

"One night," says our informant, "as I lay encamped in a dense forest, on the bank of one of the tributaries of the Amazon, with my guide and four negro servants.

zon, with my guide and four negro servants around me, I was startled from my slumbers by such a screeching and yelling as I pray Heaven I may never hear again! I jumped up, with my ideas all bewildered and confused. My camp-fire had pretty well gone down, but was still light enough to show me the black, shadowy forms of my attendants, dancing and howling around me like so many flends.

"As soon as I could shake my senses together a little, I let out my voice to its very highest pitch, and, in stentorian tones, demanded the cause of this nocturnal tumult. bers by such a screeching and yelling as I

"'A jaguar, master! a jaguar among the mules!' yelled every voice in reply.
"'Well, if there were forty jaguars, instead of one, they might have been scared into fits by this time!' returned I; 'and so cease your infernal yellings, and like rea-soning human beings, tell me all you know about it!"

"My cool and apparently unexcited manner soon had the effect of calming down the frightened wretches to a common-sense de-gree; and then I learned there had been a great commotion among the mules—which were tied so as to feed without escaping, within a short distance of the fire—and this disturbance was supposed to proceed from the presence of the dreaded jaguar in their midst—though no one had seen him, and none had possessed the courage to venture thither and ascertain.

"I lost no time in seeing that my rifle, pistols and hunting knife were in proper order; and then getting my Indian guide, the least timid of the five, armed with his long lance, bow and arrows, to keep by my side, with a blazing brand, I moved cau-tiously forward to the place where the nules were tied, the four negroes keeping close at my heels, crouching and trembling with terror. On reaching the frightened animals I was any thing but pleased to find that the suspicions of my servants were correct, and that a valuable pack-mule was among the missing. There were broad traces of blood. and a wide trail into some bushes, showing where he had been dragged away by his fierce and powerful assailant. I was so angry at the daring of the beast and my loss that I should have followed on, perhaps to my own destruction, had not the Indian guide taken hold of me, and emphatically declared I was mad to think of such a thing.

"'Don't you hear the beast growling over the carcass, master?' he said; 'and do you think that now, when he can see so much better than you, that he will let you ap proach him and return alive?

"And am I to let the audacious scoundrel escape, and he within reach of as good a rifle ball as ever let out the heart's blood of his race?' was my angry reply, as I halted

"Let us hunt him to-morrow, maste when we can do it with so much less risk,' returned the Indian. 'My friend, Cotantin, a great hunter, lives within a few leagues of here, and with his dogs and experienced attendants he will make sure of him.'

"A minute's reflection convinced me there was nothing better to be done, for to attack the gringle now, in the dark, was to give the animal now, in the dark, was to give him all the advantage; and so I smothered down my anger as well as I could, and passed a weary night in keeping watch around the fire, not one of my party venturing to again close his eyes in sleep.

"At the first blush of day I dispatched my guide in quest of his friend, charging him to bring him without fail, with all his atdants and dogs, and assuring him tendants and dogs, and assuring him that if the animal was finally caught I would pay a handsome reward.

"After it became light I went out into the thicket, and there found a small portion of my mule's carcass, the remainder having been eaten or carried off, or, perhaps, something of both; but I made no further attempt to trace the jaguar further, contenting myself to wait for the hunters and dogs. There was a small place, called Cozva, distant some ten or twelve miles, to which one of the blacks knew the way, and I sent the of the blacks knew the way, and I sent the four of them thither, with all the mules, saye one, which I reserved for my own

"After my servants had gone I was left alone for several hours, and I amused my-self by secreting myself in a thicket and trying my marksmanship upon the vultures that came in quest of the remnant left by that came in quest of the remnant left by the destroying beast. I was fortunate enough to kill six before the guide and hunters appeared upon the scene—a feat of which I was quite proud.

"My Indian guide returned about noon, bringing his Indian friend Cotantin, with three more experienced hunters, and six dogs mustled and in leash. Cotantin was a small, wiry man, straight as a needle, with jet black eyes, and a rather bright, intelligent countenance. He seemed to be in the very prime of life, and his compact, sinewy limbs were free from all restraint, his only costume being a strip of green cloth about the loins, and a band of feathers around his head. A bow and sheaf of arrows, a long spear and a knife, were his hunting imple-

them carried each a lariat and a large sheepskin with the wool on. What this latter was for, I could not imagine then, but had a chance to see it used before night.

"As hunters and dogs were all eager for the sport to begin, the sagacious brutes were led to the spot where the jaguar had made his midnight feast, and were then set free. Of course the scent was strong, and with many a wild, joyful bark, yelp and howl, away they went pell-mell, and the hunters after them, leaving me alone with Ichura, my faithful guide. I hastened to mount my mule, in order to follow them as best I could, but my guide assured me there would be no need of my departure for some time, as the dogs, getting bothered with the different scents, would play around in a circle before leading off, and even thea, it was more than likely they would not have to go far to find the gorged beast of which they were in quest.

"Ichura was right. For half an hour I heard the yelping of the dogs, first in one direction and then another, but none of them appearing to be at any considerable distance, though gradually enlarging the area of their explorations.

"At length there came those peculiar area of their explorations.

"At length there came those peculiar cries which assured the experienced hunter that his canine assistants had struck a sure scent, and clapping his hands with de-light, my guide exclaimed:

"There they go, master! there they go!

and now it may be we shall get early news of the mule-killing rascal. Come on now, master! follow me as fast as you can.' " Can the dogs do anything toward mastering such a ferocious beast? inquired I, as I spurred my mule on after the quick-footed guide.

"' No, master; they can only track him up to his tree or hole, and then it remains fer the hunters to make an end of him.'

"For a time the dogs gained on us so much that I feared they would get away from us entirely; but after pushing on for an hour, making the best speed I could through the thick wood, I heard them louder than ever away to our right.
."'I think they have him at last,' said

"Another quarter of an hour, during which we all the time seemed to be getting nearer to them, and then suddenly, on rising a small hill, we saw them frisking about a ledge, some half way down on the opposite side, with the Indians quietly standing back, apparently awaiting our ar-"On our joining them, Cotantin informed my guide, who also acted as interpreter be-tween myself and the Indians, that the jaguar had entered a hole among the rocks, and that now the white senhor would have an opportunity of witnessing a display of Indian bravery in assailing the ferocious beast in his den.

"" And how will he attack him there?" inquired I.

"'He intends to enter and spear him to death!' replied Ichura, proudly.

"I had heard something of this before; but when I saw it about to be put in practice, and considered the strength and agility and flerceness of the animal, I could not avoid a shudder at the awful fate that seemed impending over the daring adventurer. Even while the guide was speaking Cotantin himself began to prepare for the terrible contest. Putting aside his crown of feathers, his bow and quiver, wrapping one of the sheepskins about his leftarm, and firmly grasping his spear in his right hand, he walked boldly up to the mouth of the dark pit or hole, spoke a few words to his companions, who formed themselves in defensive attitudes around the entrance, and then dropping down on his hands and knees, gradually disappeared.

some two or three minutes there was a dead and ominous silence, every one seeming to listen with suspended breath and then we heard the low, sullen growis o the beast, gradually growing fiercer and lo er, till at length they burst out into a wild, angry roar. This was instantly followed by several piercing human yells or shrieks. commingled with the short, sharp, snarling growls of a savage beast in actual combat and by a thrashing, scuffling sound, as of two bodies fiercely contending. This lasted for perhaps a minute, during which my very hair seemed to stand on end, and then came a gurgling, gasping groan, a human yell, and all grew still as death, which I be-lieved was there in its most bloody and re-

"One of Cotantin's companions now quickly disappeared in the dark opening, and presently returned, carefully drawing out the bloody form of the hunter, whom a first I believed to be one mass of mangled flesh. But such was not the case. Though frightfully lacerated in two or three places, the gallant fellow was neither dead nor mortally wounded, and in the course of fig.

We lost no time in roasting three onions, then mashing them, spread them upon a folded napkin, pouring over the whole a table-spoonful of goose grease (lard or sweet oil will do as well). The poultice was applied as hot as could be borne to the throat and upper part of the neck. In ten minutes the quick short gasps ceased, and at the end of half an hour the child, warmly wrapped in a soft blanket, was sleeping soundly. The skin was moist and the breathing natural; all symptoms of the dreaded scourge had disappeared as if by magic."

Paper Organ Pipes.

A novel application of paper pulp has recently been discovered, and consists in the production of organ pipes from that material. The origin of the industry is somewhat curious. Crespi Rigtuzzo, the curate of a little Italian village, was desirous of supplying his chapel with an organ, but as the commune was too poor to find the necessary funds, he and an engineer of the name of Colombon hit upon the idea of making the pipes of paper purp, which gave such satisfactory results that the patent has been sold in Germany for £2,500. A Minute Biography.

An intelligent parent can, with very little trouble and no expense, have a valuable and interesting life's history of each child by keepthe little events of childhood as they occur and allowing it to keep it up for itself after it learns to write. One book will answer for a life time, as each item can be put upon the proper page and the year noted opposite. Even if the subject never becomes historic the history is valuable. The immediate family would find such a book useful in many ways and to children and grand-children they would be extremely precious. Such a record for a Shakespeare or a Washington would be invaluable, and even mordinary families they would become in time of value, as showing inherited traits, the effect of training and the processes of development. To the mother the most every section. Trouble between baby's first tooth and first step are as important events as a Presidential election or a South American revolution, and all the little details of her boy's babyhood become sweet to her when he has outgrown her apron strings and is out in the middle of the big world's

The hardest thing to do is to close up the record when a little life drops out and the entry must be made that after days and nights of watching and battling with disease or fever the last breath is drawn and the sweet eyes are closed forever. It is a hard line to write and oftener the little volume with many of its pages blank is laid away in some secret and precious spot where it is safe from common usage. But "Finis" is not always written thus, and it is easy to see how material of inestiand carried a gold-headed cane. Not one in the party ever made an arrest, and it is stated that the aggregate capital of the crowd is over $2,000,000. The evident intention is to select a town site. It is thought there are over thirty "deputies" now in and about Oklahoma who at noon will turn in their resignations, turn private citizens and then bounce claims.

A Good Trade.

We do not remember a boy in Reno that ever learned the trade of a barber, and yet it is one of the Eastern town the size of this there | venture it. Friday morning fully 700 would be from one to five apprentices all the time at the business. It brings an easy, indoor life, not exposed to summer's sun nor winter's winds. The wages are good and the pay is cash. If a radius of five miles from the border of the contrart of the contract of t prentices all the time at the busiman desires to set up for himself no great capital is required and if he does not do a large business he he does not do a large business he needs fewer hands and does a large proportion of the work himself. He never needs to borrow any capital and his expenses depend entirely upon his patronage. So if his personal habits are correct he need fear neither competition nor complication. We cannot see why some of our smart Reno boys why some of our smart Reno boys should not take advantage of so good an opening. It is always honorable to be honorably employed; much more so than te tween the boomers and the Indians.

Sr. Louis, April 22.-A special dispatch from Oklahoma says everybody is on the alert to make a grand rush across the line at noon. Large sums are being paid for swift horses, so that purchasers may reach choice parts first. There is as much, if not more, struggling for town sites as for sections. It is said that thirty-two town companies are going for Guthrie, half that number for Oklahoma City and town-site companies promises to be as dangerous as among claim hunters. A bold scheme has been concocted. It is evident there is not room in Okla-homa for all the boomers, so a band has been formed that those who are left out will make a united rush and occupy the Cherokee strip, hoping to get so many on it that the Government will not think it wise to drive them off. Capitalists of San Francisco sent G.

W. Perkins to locate a site for a town, which they will build and call 'Frisco. Perkins and party stood on the rear platform after leaving Purcell, and just after the Candian river was crossed they concealed themselves in the bushes. The chances are that the sit-uation of 'Frisco will be near this Massachusetts Election. Bosron, April 27.-The returns up to 3 P. M. of one city and fourteen towns give the following votes on the constitutional prohibition amendment:

DELAWARE BREAKWATER, April 22.-The steamer Missouri sailed for Philadelphia at 7:30 this morning. The details of the wreck of the Danmark are expected on her arrival there.

Lewis, Delaware, April 22.-No communication could be had from the ship with the steamer Missouri this ship with the steamer Missouri this morning. She will reach Newcastle, Del., probably between 12 and 1 o'clock and get to Philadelphia late this afternoon.

New York April 22.—It is likely that some of passengers of the steamer Danmark, who were rescued by the steamer Missouri, will be in New York to-night. This forenoon a dispatch was received by the agents of the Danmark from Peter Wright & Sons at Philadelphia, agents of the Missouri, that the latter left Delaware Breakthis morning and would be in Philathis morning and would be in Phila this morning and would be in Philadelphia between two and three o'clock this afternoon. Captain Murrell of the Missouri, telegraphs: "The Missouri arrived all well with 365 passengers of the steamer Danmark, abandoned April 6th. The rest of the passengers and crew, 340, landed at St Michael's all well. Please see the Thingvilla line agents to make all arrangements to forward these people to New York to-night."

Easter Monday-No Apprehension Washington, April 22. - Easter Monday is always children's day at the White House and the grounds. To-day the infantile boomers swarmed into the grounds, made their locations on the grassy knolls, and proceeded to the joyous occupation of rolling the brilliantly dyed Easter eggs. The oc-cupants of the Executive mansion fre-que tly appeared at the windows.

The Marine Band furnished music.

No apprehension is felt at the Navy Department respecting the non-arrival of the Monongahela and Brooklyn at their destination. The Monongahela sailed for Samoa from San Francisco on February 21st. She was deeply laden with coal and stores, proceeding ing under sail, so she could hardly make the passage in sixty days, unless the conditions were very favorable. The Brooklyn is exected at New York every day. She is about two weeks out from St. Thomas, and is severed His Connection. Washington, April 22. - First

Comptroller Durham severed his connection with the Treasury Department

The resignation rose out of a refusa by Durham to allow the bill of John I. Davenport of New York for $3,000 for extraordinary expenses, as election commissioner during the Presidential election. This caused an open rup-ture with the Attorney General. These accounts were then taken out of his hands. Secretary Windom said this afternoon that he accepted Durham's resignation in the ordinary course of business and not because of any fault with the latter's official conduct, but ecause of several newspaper articles reflecting on the administration which are said to have been inspired by the first Comptroller. These attributed sentiments to the First Comptroller, which if true, must have made it un-pleasant for him to continue in office under existing circumstances.

Toledo, Ohio, April 22.-The Toledo Blade says this afternoon that W. R. Burt of Saganaw, President of the Michigan Salt Association, will sail Wednesday for Europe to raise $10,000,000 to perfect a salt trust. It is understood that no attempt will be saved annually.

Boston, April 22.-To-day is voting day upon the proposed amendment to the constitution of Massachusetts prohibiting the manufacture and sale of hibting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The day is bright and cool with prospects favorable for a large vote. Both parties have been active in the campaign. The day is a legal holiday and the exchanges and wholesale business houses are closed. The indications point to the defeat of the amendment.

LIFE'S FOUNTAIN.

A GAZETEE reporter was called into a neighboring cottage this morning to Judd. witness the result of a new and what may prove to be an important discovery. It is a simple device by means of which, it is claimed, all manner of house plants can be induced to grow as luxuriantly in doors as out. While the growing of vigorous and luxuriant house plants may of itself be of little service to mankind, the principle by which this result is accomplished may be the key that shall lead scientists to other much greater and more valuable discoveries. It is a well-known fact that plants and shrubs grown in pots, that plants and shrubs grown in pots, though provided with an abundance of soil, moisture, sunlight and air, are much more feeble than the same shrub grown in the open air and permitted to draw its vigor from mother earth. With all the surroundings apparently equal the life of the out door plant is vigorous and joyful, while its counterpart in doors, with an apparent protest, is struggling for an existence. Evidently with the conditions of the house plant some element in nature is lacking. Efforts to solve the mystery lead to the alleged discovery above mentioned. The plant lacked direct communication with the fountain of all life—the earth, and this is sup-communication with the fountain of all life—the earth, and this is supplied by means of a small copper wire, one end of which is placed in the ground and the other in the bottom of the jar or vessel holding the plant, a ground wire, as the telegraphers call it. The experiment was first tried upon an orange tree growing in a large keg, and the discoverer declares that within a week after placing the ground wire in position the tree forsook its wire in position the tree forsook its seeming protest, assumed a brighter green and has ever since grown with tropical vigor. He has since applied the principle to a variety of other plants with like happy results. There is no patent on this discovery, and any one is at liberty to try it.

Bigger and Better.

S. H. Barrett made a pleasant call at the GAZETTE office this morning. His private car is here, and after Reno is covered three deep with bills and pictures Carson will be attacked. The sells Brothers' shows all wintered at Stockton, and Mr. Barrett says every one was delighted with the climate and the people. One of the papers says the shows are better than they ever were and asks if they will never stop growing. It says they have put Barrett's shows with theirs and they will all travel together. They were booked for Australia last fall, but did not go on account of the drouth and labor troubles. They will go from labor troubles. They will go from Reno east and after their summer's tour, winter in Ohio

The Tramp Nuisance. A railroad man informed a GAZETTE reporter that he would wager there were 200 tramps between here and Truckee, and some of them are cf the most vicious class. As the swing was coming down the other day four or five burly fellows boarded the caboose, and upon being told to get off, they informed the caboose brakeman he was not big enough to undertake the job, but upon catching sight of a revolver they scampered off in hot haste, yowing vengence when they must him. vowing vengeance when they met him at Reno. Rocks are principally their weapons of warfare, and many a day the railroad boys and the tramps make targets of one another.

residence of Mr. need, the foreman. The body was dragged a few feet over the rocks to the large ditch, into which it was thrown. The rocks over which the body was dragged had been turned over, and, upon turn-ing them back, they were found to be covered with blood. A half-dozen cartridge shells were also found where the attack was made

A Disgusted Tramp

Last Thursday evening, in the Reno yard, a tramp fastened his partner in an east-bound caboose "well," with instructions to make a noise and be liberated when he got to Wadsworth. The fellow either miscalculated the distance, or else he fell asleep, for when the caboose returned here next morning he reported and was let out, but, after taking a critical view of his surroundings, he expressed his disgust by ejaculating, "I am a — of a — if I ain't in Reno again!"

A Fortunate Druggist.

Mr. Edwin W. Joy for many years and now a prosperous druggist on the corner of Stockton and Market streets in San Francisco, probably er dreamed of rivaling in wealth the medicine kings of the country. But various run having been floating around to the effect that he has struck it big, an Examiner reporter was detailed to unearth the cause, and after much difficulty unraveled the following story: It seems that about seven years ago an English physician, a great student of botany, located in this city. His practice was not extersive, and yet the few cases that came to him attracted no little attention. His success seemed to be in the treatment of liver and kidney disorders, with these common complaints was marvelous. He seemed almost infallible, and his quiet modest methods and his well-kept secret was parture about a year later Mr. Joy determined to fathom the secret, and copying all the pre criptions he had filled for the erratic doctor ination he discovered running all through the prescriptions for liver and kidney troubles vitisted blood and stomach disorders a couple of vegetable extracts indigenous to California, so simple and so well known under homely every day names to every school boy as to entirely dissipate the suspicion that they were the active principles involved. So certain, however was Mr. Joy that he had discovered the secret, that he embodied the new elements in a preparation of Sassaparilla to disguise the taste, and put it before his customers under the modest name of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. Immediately the same marvelous stories came back of its astonishing effects, and the mystery was solved, and the talk it has created has already caused it to step into prominence, and orders pour in daily from all over the coast, and thus another California industry lesps into avistance.—S. THE ELEPHANTS' FATE.

It Is Similar to That Which Has Overtaken the Buffalo.

The Great African Pachyderm Now "But as Grass," and the Places That Have Known Him Will Soon "Know Him No More"—The Work of Extermination.

At the beginning of this century, says the St. James' Gazette, the elephant was found plentifully upon the eastern confines and ony. As lately as 1830 ivory hunters pursued their calling in the dense bush veldt of the Eastern Province, and still later in Kaffraria. But the Cape Government, fore-seeing the probability of the mighty beast's extinction within a few years, proclaimed measures of protection; and it is a curious fact that there exist at the present moment, within the southeastern limits of Cape Col-ony—within sight of the Indian Ocean— more wild elephonts then are to be found. more wild elephants than are to be found for probably fifteen hundred miles inland. In Addo Bush, not far from Port Elizabeth, In Addo Bush, not far from Port Elizabeth, in the Knysna and Zitzikamina forests, and upon the jungle slopes of the Winterheck Mountains, troops of elephants yet wander free and undisturbed, as also does the flerce and gloomy buffalo, and that king of antelopes, the Koodoo. Beyond the Ker, in Kaffraria itself, where fostering protective laws have not extended, the elephant is extinct.

Passing eastward through Natal, once abounding in but now devoid of elephants, we reach Zululand. In that territory between 1850 and 1875 immense numbers of the great pachyderm were hunted and de-stroyed. Baldwin, Drummond and other well-known nimrods, besides a numerous array of obscure but quite as deadly Dutch and colonial professional hunters, have practically wrought extinction in the Zulu North of the Zulus, in Amatongaland, the same state of things exists, with the difference that some numbers of ele-phants driven by the incursive gold diggers and prospectors of Swaziland from their ancient secluded haunts in that territory, have recently trekked south across the Amatonga border. Here their extermina-tion must soon follow. It is probable that the country most abounding in the poor remnant of elephants now south of the Zambesi is the unnealthy region lying east and northeast of the Transvaal border—much of it known as Umzilaland. Here the prevalence of deadly fever in the hot months and the tse-tse fly have alone prevented Dutch hunters from completing their work of destruction; but even here the supply of elephant life is now sparse and limited and can not long hold out. The Orange Free State, from the treeless, open orange Free State, from the treeless, open nature of its terrain, although formerly crowded with other game, was never a haunt of elephants. But not so with the Transvaal. Here in 1837 Captain Cornwallis Harris, one of the first to explore the beautiful but unknown wilds then held by the fierce Moselikatze and his Matabeles, found elephants in astounding plenty. In one valley alone he saw wandering in peaceful seclusion hundreds of the gray beasts. But close on the heels of Harris followed the Boer Voertrekkers, who, having attacked and driven out Moselikatze, turned their attention to the extraordinary wealth of ivory within their new found borders. Their labors have been but too successful, and there now remains to the vast territories of the South African republic probably not one solitary wild ele-phant. All have vanished. North of the Transvaal lie Matabele and Mashonalands, the country now ruled by Lodengula, son of the dreaded Moselikatze. So recently as between 1871 and 1875 these lands were tenanted by vast numbers of elephants. But, as Mr. F. C. Seleus, the well-known hunter, tells us, it is now difficult in a year's hunting to come across a single elephant in these countries. Mr. Selous himself, the mightiest elephant hunter of these or any other times, who has devoted the greatest part of the last seventeen years to the fierce toil and countless dangers of ivory hunting, and the numerous Dutch and other hunters who have ravaged the country, have much to answer for in this matter. But, after all, they have been but the instru-ments of supply to a pitiless and never-ceasing demand. Turning westward to Bechuanaland the same story has to be told. In Gordon Cumming's time—1846 to 1850—Bamangwato, now ruled by Khama, was a veldt virgin to the hunter. Gordon Cumming himself was one of the first to exploit it, and by him, Os one of the first to exploit it, and by him, Os-well and Vardon, and afterward by Bald-win and others, great execution was wrought among the elephants, even as far to the west as Lake N'Gami. Professional hunters have, since Gordon Cumming's day, completed absolutely the work of extirpation in these lands. In one year alone, after the discovery of Lake N'Gami (1849), Livingstone tells us that nine hundred elephants were slain in the region of the Great Lake. What wealth of animal life, although backed by countless years of undisturbed freedom and repose, could withstand the barbarous ravages of so short-sighted a policy? North Bechuanaland, including its Zambesi borders, and the Mababe veldt—once a great hunting ground—and the Lake N'Gami regions, are now all but completely denuded of ivory. Passing yet further to the westward, across the Kalahari, which now shares the dearth of Bechuanaland, we reach the countries of the Namaquas and Damaras. Here the same Livingstone tells us that nine hundred ele Namaquas and Damaras. Here the same miserable history has to be recorded. Since miserable history has to be recorded. Since the time of the explorer Charles Andersson, between 1850 and 1860, when elephants were found in abundance in Southwest Africa, succeeding years have seen the profes-sional hunters pursuing without mercy or cessation their work of slaughter; and ele-phants may now be found no further south than Comprehend where the native batted Weekly Call and Weekly Gazette and

But when it is remembered that 1,200,000 pounds of ivory are yearly imported into England, for which supply it has been computed that 50,000 elephants are annually slain; when it is remembered that for the annual supply of the whole world 100,000 elephants must yearly suffer death, no sane person can resist the conclusion that the days of the African elephant are now "but as grass," and that his place will soon "know him no more."

AN EARTHLY PARADISE. Where Even the Wind Is Tempered to the

Where Even the Wind is Tempered to the Shorn Lamb.

Whatever may be the proportion of philosophic spectators and of conscientious opponents of gaming to inveterate gamblers and cursory punsters who risk a few louis now and again, "just for the fun of the thing," the fact remains that Monte Carlo has become the fact remains that Monte Carlo has be-come an earthly paradise, says the London Standard; that the gardens, with their sub-tropical vegetation, are enchantingly beau-tiful; that the views from the terrace are more than Neapolitan in their soft leveli-ness; and that the drive from Nice along the Cornice road and through Villefranche, Beaulien, Rochebrune and Monaco is almost unequaled in its bright picturesqueness. The hotels of Monte Carlo, to those who know how to choose their domicile, are not more expensive than those of Nice; the res-ident doctors are skilled and moderate in their terms; and, if the population be not about the happiest to be found on the con-tinent, the blame assuredly does not lie at the door either of the paternal Grimaldi or the more than paternal Banque de Monaco. The Monagasques pay no takes, are subject to no conscription, enjoy the advantages of excellent paving, lighting, drainage and sanitation, and run no risk of being injured in pocket through the vicinity of the Casino, seeing that a paternal government does not allow the natives of the principality to play at the tables. Health seekers, again, are arriving at the conclusion that the climate of Monte Carlo is in winter warmer and more staple than that of Nice; that the cut-throat "mistral" rarely careers over the bay of La Con-damme; and that the little town is altogethere more sheltered than the great blazing, windy, dusty, Mediterranean watering place. Then, again, for persons in really delicate health, the amenity of Mentone is easily accessible; and beyond the Riviers in its Italian section, opens up a whole chain of delightful winter resorts be-tween Ventimiglia and Savona, which, twenty years ago, were never heard of in England years ago, were never heard of in England. San Remo, Bordighera, Alassio and a score more pretty and genial seaside hamlets have now their regular complement of wealthy patrons from England and the States, and every season spacious, elegant and clean hotels and "pensions" continue to spring up, superseding the artistic and pretty little trategical and "liceande" of the next Have "osterie" and "locande" of the past. Have the roulette and trente-et-quarante tables of Monte Carlo been exclusively, or even principally, instrumental in bringing to these smiling shores so many thousands of Angle-Saxon pilgrims, or is it that the prime cause of the amazing popularity of the Riviera is its accessibility from England? Only thirty hours' traveling, including the steamboat journey from Dover is, will now enable the valetudinarian or the pleasure seeker to exchange the smoke, the fog, the sleet, the raw damp or the piercing cold of a London winter for the palms, the cactus and prickly pear, the oranges and olives and almond blossoms, the blue sky and bright sun of the Riviera. Is it to be wondered at, then, that princes, peers, politicians, people in society and people out of society, that all sorts and conditions of men and wemen who can put money in their purses, are flocking to the Riviera, notwithstanding the potential wickedness of Monte Carlo and its gam-

A WOODPECKER'S JOKE.

The Bird Was Very Funny, But Paid Dearly for His Little Trick. H. B. Parker, of Salem, Ill., relates a good bird story, which he sends to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "I was engaged in the monument and tomb-stone business," he writes, "and made and put up in the Catholic cemetery of a Southern Illinois town a stone imitation of a rustic cross, standing on a pile of rocks. Some few days after I set the cross up I had some other work to do in the cemetery, and my attention was called to a large woodpecker of the yellow-hammer variety very industriously tapping hammer variety very industriously tapping away at my cross. I said to myself: 'Old fellow, I don't think you will pan out very well on that stump.' I watched him with some curiosity. He came to the same conclusion apparently in a little while, and flew to a dead tree that had been left standing about twenty feet from the cross, tried that awhile, and then flew back to the cross, seemingly puzzled to account for things, then backward and forward for some little then backward and forward for some little time, testing the difference apparently, when all of a sudden he left and started for the timber, about half a mile distant. "I continued my work, thinking no mor of the matter, but in the course of half an hour, I should judge, on looking up I saw some ten or twelve birds over my head mak-ing toward the cross, one seemingly in the lead, who lit on the cross and commenced tapping for dear life. Most of the others lit on the tree, but finally all got to work on the cross. I sat down and watched the proceedings. The original woodpecker seemed to be running the business, as he would fly back and forward from tree to cross till he back and forward from tree to cross till he had them all at work picking away. They did not seem to be very well satisfied, but he would, as it looked to me, encourage them by seemingly getting something for his work by his actions. I so judged anyway. At last he fiew back on the tree by himself, watching them, and I thought I could see a gleam of fun in his eyes. He then, as they were all busily engaged, gave one of his woodpeckerian screeches, and one of his woodpeckerian screeches, and left for the woods in high glee. The rest looked at each other, and I came to the conclusion that they were settling in their minds, if they had any, that they were sold and looked mad; and they all started hot-foot for the timber.

"It was then about time for dinner, and I started for home somewhat amused at the

"After dinner I went back to finish my work, and had to pass the cross on my way to the job I was doing, and noticed a good many feathers lying around in the lot, all from the yellow-hammer bird. I couldn't account for them, and went up to the cross account for them, and went up to the cross to examine more closely, when I discovered a dead woodpecker lying on the rock at the foot of the cross, every feather picked as clean as possible and his head all picked to pieces. I came to the conclusion that it was the joker who had paid so dear for his fun.

Where Flies Go in Winter.

me one has asked the Washington (N. dessenger where do flies go in the win-C.) Messenger where do flies go in the wat-ter? This is a question of some interest, for a house fly is born fully grown and of mature size, and there are no little flies of the same size, and there are no little flies of the same species, the small one occasionally observed being different in kind from the large ones. The house fly does not bite or pierce the skin, but gathers its food by a comb or rake or brush-like tongue, with which it is able to scrape the varnish from covers of books, and it thus tickles the skin of persons upon which it alights to feed upon the perspiration. A fly is a scavenger, and is a vehicle by which contagious diseases are spread. It poisons wounds and may carry deadly virus, from decaying organic matter into food. Frettres from sight at the beginning of winter, but where it goes few persons know. If a search of the house is made they will be found in great numbers secreted in warm places in the roof or between the partitions or floors.
